Explanatory

THE Index contained in this volume includes references to thirteen volumes of Opinions of the Corporation Counsel and Assistants, and covers the period from January 1, 1872, to April 15, 1925. It is issued in response to a general demand on the part of those who have secured and retained volumes of these opinions and have found them useful in their practice. It is obvious that an index covering the entire series will greatly increase the value of the books and do away with the necessity of referring to the large number of indexes appearing in the separate volumes.

The office of "Counsel to the Corporation" existed under the old charter of the City of Chicago. By Section 7 of Chapter 3 of the Act of February 13, 1863, he was designated as the chief officer of the Law Department of the City. Later the title of the officer was changed to "Corporation Counsel," and this new designation appears in the Cities and Villages Act, which was adopted in place of the former charter by the City of Chicago in 1874.

It has been the practice of the Law Department since the beginning of the year 1872 to preserve and print such of the opinions rendered as were regarded as of general public interest or as being useful to the department for future reference. The records of the City prior to that time were destroyed in the Great Fire of 1871, and therefore no opinions rendered before 1872 are available. As a result of this custom of preserving such opinions, the following volumes, all entitled "Opinions of the Corporation Counsel and Assistants," have from time to time been issued:

1. Opinions from January, 1872, to March, 1897, published by William G. Beale.
2. Opinions from April 5, 1897, to April 10, 1905, published by Edgar Bronson Tolman.
3. Opinions from April 10, 1905, to April 15, 1907, rendered during the incumbency of James Hamilton Lewis, published in 1925 by Francis X. Busch.
4. Opinions from April 15, 1907, to December 31, 1908, published by Edward J. Brundage.
5. Opinions from January 1, 1909, to March 31, 1911, published by Edward J. Brundage.
6. Opinions from April 1, 1911, to December 31, 1912, published by William H. Sexton.
7. Opinions from January 1, 1913, to October 5, 1914, published by William H. Sexton.
8. Opinions from October 6, 1914, to April 26, 1915, published by John W. Beckwith.
9. Opinions from May 1, 1915, to June 30, 1916, published by Samuel A. Ettelson.
10. Opinions from July 1, 1916, to December 31, 1919, published by Samuel A. Ettelson.
11. Opinions from January 1, 1920, to April 15, 1923, published by Samuel A. Ettelson.
12. Opinions from April 16, 1923, to April 15, 1924, published by Francis X. Busch.
13. Opinions from April 16, 1924, to April 15, 1925, published by Francis X. Busch.

Copies of the various books above set forth were distributed among the lawyers of the City of Chicago whose practice was of a character that made the volumes interesting to them. They were also sent to the chief law officers of most of the large cities and to some others who were particularly concerned, such as librarians, editors of law books, compilers of digests, etc.

The opinions contained in these books cover a wide range of subjects, and in many cases pass on questions which have arisen for which no precedents could be found. Generally speaking, they are well considered and consistent, and, with remarkably few exceptions, when the questions thus decided were the subject of subsequent litigation, have been approved by judicial authority. Such volumes as are in the libraries of the members of the profession who deal with municipal questions have usually been found valuable and suitable for quick reference.

Only one edition of the volume was printed in each case. Consequently, all of these volumes may be said to be out of print, and copies of some of the earlier ones have become very scarce. Nevertheless, reference may be had to the full series in such places as the Law Institute of Chicago, the Chicago Bar Association Library, the Chicago Municipal Reference Library, and the Chicago Public Library.

The volumes of opinions have not been numbered. Since only a part of the series is in the possession of many lawyers who use them, we believe it might lead to confusion if we attempted to refer to the volumes now in print by number. We have therefore given the reference in each case to the volume by the year in which it concludes rather than by number. Thus, when the reference is "1897," it will be understood to mean that the volume for the period from January, 1872, to March, 1897, is referred to; when the reference is 1905, the volume from April 5, 1897, to April 10, 1905, is referred to, and so on. While this may appear troublesome at first, it will be found practicable and convenient when it is fully understood.

It is to be hoped that the addition of this volume, containing a general index for ready reference to all the volumes up to date of the series of printed opinions, will be found useful by all who have any of the volumes. It is the intention to publish new volumes of opinions hereafter from year to year, as was done in 1923-4 and 1924-5, with an index to each volume patterned after the general index here presented. The series will thus be maintained in such a manner as to make it available for the purposes intended for the entire period.
